

Sexual lubrication from the company below (IDLube) was distributed at the 2014 Oregon Adolescent Sexuality conference where nearly 1/3 of attendees were minors. Title of the conference: “Building Blocks to Youth Sexual Health”.

Is youth sexual health really being promoted? Should the topic of pleasure discussed openly and honestly between teachers and their mixed gender classrooms? Would you want your local school board members discussing their thoughts and experiences around the topic of pleasure at your next school board meeting? Why is the Oregon Department of Education promoting an annual Adolescent Sexuality Conference that boasts that it employs “best practices” and “age appropriate” content while featuring a sex toy shop owner as a keynote speaker and passing out lube and condoms to children? Parents, guardians, teachers, administrators and all tax payers in a community deserve to know why our tax dollars are going to support and endorse such “comprehensive sexuality education”.

The image shows a screenshot of a web browser displaying a WordPress blog post on the left and a screenshot of the IDLube website on the right. The browser's address bar shows 'parentsrightsined.wordpress.com'. The blog post has a yellow circle with the number '23' next to it. The text of the post reads: 'Let's say that minors who attended the recent 2014 Adolescent Sexuality Conference held in Seaside Oregon picked up a sample of IDLube, liked it and wanted to get more. Here is what they would find on the IDLube company website: <http://www.idlube.com/>'. Below this, it lists the steering committee: 'the Oregon Department of Education, DHS, Oregon Health Authority, Oregon Attorney General's Sexual Assault Task Force.' The screenshot of the IDLube website shows a navigation menu with 'LUBRICANTS', 'Our Products', 'Our Story', 'Find Our Lube', 'Contact Us', and 'Blog'. The main banner features 'Juicy Lube' with the tagline 'Naturally Flavored & Sweetened' and a row of colorful product containers. A woman is shown using a sex toy. Below the banner are several smaller promotional images, including one for 'EXTRA THICK' and another for 'LOOKING FOR LUBRICANTS'.
